Biografía

Soy Asesor del Economista Jefe en el Departamento de Investigación del Banco para el Desarrollo Asiático (Manila, Filipinas), donde trabajo desde 1996. Mis principales funciones son asesorar al Economista Jefe sobre temas de desarrollo en general y, más específicamente, sobre sus implicaciones tanto para las operaciones del Banco como para consultas y diálogo de política económica con los países miembros del Banco; y liderar el programa de trabajo sobre “Transformación Económica en Asia”. He viajado por todo Asia y participado en numerosas reuniones de asesoramiento sobre política económica a Gobiernos de la región, en particular sobre el diseño de planes de desarrollo.

Durante 2007-2011, fui Principal Economist y después Lead Economist en el Departamento de Asia Central y Occidental; y previamente fui Principal Economist, Senior Economist y Economist en el Departamento de Investigación del Banco. Anteriormente, fui Profesor en la Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (Hong Kong, China) durante 1995-996, y en el Georgia Institute of Technology (Atlanta, Estados Unidos), durante 1999-2002 (mientras estaba en excedencia del Banco para el Desarrollo Asiático). Obtuve la Licenciatura en la Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. Soy Master por la International University of Japan y por la University of Pennsylvania; y soy Doctor por la University of Pennsylvania.

Mis áreas de investigación e interés son el crecimiento a largo plazo en Asia (especialmente el debate sobre las fuentes del crecimiento en el Este Asiático), cambio estructural, política industrial, inclusive growth y pleno empleo, impacto de la tecnología sobre el empleo, productividad, progreso tecnológico, la distribución funcional de la renta, ciclos económicos, y la evolución de las tasas de rentabilidad. En la actualidad trabajo en proyectos sobre Crecimiento Inclusivo (Inclusive Growth), Política Industrial Moderna, La Trampa de la Renta Media, y Cambio Estructural e Industrialización (ver el capítulo especial titulado “Asia’s Economic Transformation: Where to, How, and How Fast?” en la publicación Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2013; y el capítulo especial titulado “Growth Amid Change” en el Asian Development Outlook 2007).

Jesús Felipe Tablado

Durante los años 2007-2011, mientras trabajé en el Departamento de Asia Central y Occidental, coordiné todo el análisis económico sobre las economías de las ex repúblicas soviéticas de Asia, así como de Pakistán. Esto incluía las contribuciones al Asian Development Outlook, diagnósticos de crecimiento, evaluación del impacto de proyectos, y la preparación de las Estrategias de País de las economías de la región. También dirigí el diseño de planes de desarrollo a largo plazo para energía, transporte y servicios urbanos de Kazajistán y Uzbekistán; así como los programas de industrialización y cambio estructural para Pakistán y los países de Asia Central (estas últimos son economías en transición, sin salida al mar, dependientes de recursos naturales con problemas para diversificar su estructura de producción y exportaciones, y con mala infraestructura para el comercio).

Desde el año 2008 soy miembro del Consejo Editorial de Metroeconomica. Entre 2005 y 2013, fui miembro de la World Academy of Art and Science. También fui Investigador Asociado del Cambridge Centre for Economic & Public Policy, University of Cambridge; del Centre of Full Employment and Equity (CoffEE), University of Newcastle (Australia); del Center for Full Employment and Price Stability (CFEPS), University of Missouri-Kansas City; y del Levy Economics Institute of Bard College, New York.

Mi publicación más reciente es un libro que trata la falta de fundamentos teóricos de la función de producción agregada (el problema de la agregación), y sus implicaciones para trabajos empíricos (por ejemplo, en las campos del crecimiento o del empleo), titulado The Aggregate Production Function and the Measurement of Technical Change: 'Not Even Wrong' (Edward Elgar, 2013). En 2009, publiqué Inclusive Growth, Full Employment and Structural Change. Implications and Policies for Developing Asia (Anthem Press, 2009). También soy co-autor y co-editor de un libro titulado Labor Markets in Asia: Issues and Perspectives (Palgarve Macmillan, 2006). Este libro fue seleccionado en el año 2006 por la Universidad de Princeton como uno de los Noteworthy Books in Industrial Relations and Labor Economics (Libros más significativos en relaciones industriales y economía del trabajo). En la actualidad trabajo en Development and Modern Industrial Policy in Practice: Issues and Country Experiences (Edward Elgar, 2015).

He publicado más de 70 artículos de investigación en (entre otros) el Applied Economics, Cambridge Journal of Economics, Eastern Economic Journal, Economics of Education Review, International Review of Applied Economics, Japan and the World Economy, Journal of Comparative Economics, Journal of Development Studies, Journal of Income Distribution, Journal of the Japanese and International Economies, Journal of Post Keynesian Economics, Metroeconomica, Oxford Development Studies, Structural Change and Economic Dynamics, y World Development.
